EDUCATION

Postdoctoral Training

Population Health Program of the Canadian Institute of Advanced Research, General Motors
Postdoctoral Fellow (1998-2001)

Harvard University School of Public Health: Summer Program in Design, Measurement and Evaluation for Health Outcomes Research (2001)

University of Michigan: Summer Program in Quantitative Methods (1999)

PhD - 1992-1997 Department of Geography, McMaster University

MA - 1990-1992 Department of Geography, Queen's University

BA (hons) - 1986-1990 Department of Geography, Queen's University

AWARDS AND DISTINCTIONS

- Canada Research Chair (Tier 1) in the Geo-Social Determinants of Health (2015-2022)
- Trottier Fellow in Science and Public Policy (2015-17)
- FRSQ Chercheurs-Boursiers, Santé et Société, Junior 2 (2009-12)
- Canadian Institutes of Health Research (CIHR) New Investigator Salary Award (2002-07)
- Fonds de Recherche en Santé Québec (FRSQ) Professeur Stratégique Career Award (2002-05)
- Core Member, Canadian Institute of Advanced Research (CIAR) New Investigator Network (2003-07)
- Queen's University Gold Medal in Geography (1990)
- Canadian Association of Geographers Prize (1990)

OTHER PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE (Statistics Canada)

Senior Social Science Researcher, Health Analysis and Measurement Group (1998-2001)

Economist/Sociologist/Statistician Recruit, Health Statistics Division (1997-98)

My work is interdisciplinary. Authorship conventions differ in the medical and social sciences. In general, student trainees are first authors even in cases where the work was very closely supervised and directed. For the medical journals, when I am corresponding author and the paper originated in our lab, I am indicated last and this represents senior authorship (e.g., *Sampson et al., 2014; *Hajna et al., 2013). I am often listed as second author in the social science papers when a student is first author and these cases indicate senior authorship as well (e.g., *Wasfi et al., 2013; *deBono et al., 2012).

Courses Taught at McGill

My teaching at McGill is multidisciplinary and at all levels of instruction (large introductory undergraduate classes through graduate seminar). It involves three courses created at McGill and reaches students on both the downtown and Macdonald campuses. The courses taught are:

GEOG 221 – Environment and Health (large (~200 students) introductory course co-taught by Prof. Ian Strachan and taught on both the Downtown and Macdonald campuses).

GEOG 303 – Health Geography (large (~80 students) upper-level course). This course is now being taught by a recent recruit, Prof. Mylene Riva, while I hold an administrative appointment.

GEOG 503 – Advanced Topics in Health Geography (graduate seminar course (~15 students) co-taught by Prof. Berrang-Ford).
